Nowadays, we tend to hear a lot about E-learning which is defined as a new method of learning based on digital technologies, whose aim is to give learners an open, enjoyable and interactive learning environment that supports and enhances learning processes. The main goal of this survey is to determine the types of videos that Algerian secondary school learners prefer to use in their informal learning.

The study sample included 413 informants (220 females and 193 males), aged between 14 and 18 years old. The questionnaire was used to collect data based on questions with multiple answers choices. The results indicated that secondary students spent more than 4 hours online daily. They preferred educational content in short videos of 10 minutes at maximum, as well as videos containing content related to materials and exercises or presentation about methods of solving exercises without the presence of a teacher's picture. The results show that 67 % of answers on our survey were female and 33% of male shows the importance of using the available technological tools in the learning process that help students to access available knowledge.
