Text: # The Spread of Islam in Africa

مُحَمَّد ابن عَبدُ الكَرِيم المَغِيلِي

Muhammad ibn Abd al-Karim al-Maghili is an Algerian scholar and influential figure in the development of Islam. He was born around 1440 in Tlemcen, His impact extended across North and West Africa, where he played a significant role in converting Africans to Islam among the Hausa, Fulani, and Tuareg peoples. (Sahara and West Africa)

In his childhood, Muammad was taught Quran and basic religion sciences by his father Abdulkarim. He also learnt Tafseer and Fiqh in Telemcen. After that, he travelled to Bejaia and then to Algiers to study advanced religion sciences.

While he was living in Tuat (Adrar), he was trying to reduce the Jewish negative domination on local people .Since he was preaching to people, he published many books like "Fath Al-Mubeen" and "Tafseer Al-Fatiha". His writings influenced the Islamization of West Africa including (Niger, Mali, Nigeria, Burkina Faso) leaving a lasting heritage.

Al-Maghili's contributions continue to resonate, making him an outstanding figure in the history of Islam in North and West Africa. Before he died in 1504 in Adrar, Algeria, he performed pilgrimage to Mecca. His life and works are documented in various sources.
