A/Comprehension (7pts)

The valley of the Indus River is considered to be the birthplace of the Indus civilization. Located on the Indian subcontinent in modern Pakistan, the Indus civilization was not discovered by archaeologists until 1924. The ancient history of this region is obscured by legend. It appears, however, that by 4000 BC primitive farmers were growing vegetables, grains, and breeding animals along the riverbanks.

There is some evidence that Mesopotamian traders reached the nearly Indian people by sailing from Sumer to the Indus valley. The Indians shared some developments - such as complex irrigation and drainage systems, and the art of writing – with Sumer, they also developed their own system of writing.

The Indus civilization had large cities that were well laid-out and well -fortified. There were public buildings, palaces, baths, and large granaries to hold agricultural produce. The many artworks found by archaeologists indicate that the residents of the Indus had reached a fairly high level of culture before their civilization was destroyed.
