PART ONE: Reading (15 points)

A. Comprehension: (07points)

Read the text carefully then do the activities below.

Ancient Egypt was the birth place of one of the world's first civilizations. This advanced culture arose about 5,000 years ago in the Nile River Valley in northeastern Africa. It flourished for over 2,000 years and so became one of the longest lasting civilization in history.

The powerful Nile River was the life-blood of ancient Egypt. The fertile, rich, dark soil of its banks enabled farmers to raise a huge supply of food .The ancient Egyptians called their country Kemet, meaning Black Land , after the dark soil. The Nile also provided water for irrigation and was Egypt's main transportation route. For these reasons, the ancient Greek historians called Egypt " the gift of the Nile"

The ancient Egyptians made outstanding contributions to the development of civilization. They created the world's first national government, basic forms of arithmetic, and a 365-day calendar. They invented a form of picture writing called hieroglyphics. They also invented papyrus, a paper like writing material made from the stems of papyrus plants. The Egyptians developed one of the first religions to emphasize life after death. They built great cities in which many skilled architects, doctors, engineers, painters and sculptors worked.

The best known achievements of the ancient Egyptians, however, are the pyramids. They were built as tombs for their rulers, kings and queens as they believed that they could enjoy life after death. The most famous pyramids stand at Giza. These gigantic stone structure-marvels of architectural and engineering skills have been preserved by the dry climate for about 4,500 years. They serve as spectacular reminders of the glory of ancient Egypt.

PART ONE: READING (15pts)

A/ Comprehension (7pts)

Read the text carefully then do the following activities:

Working children lives are difficult not just because of their work. Their families are poor or they have no families and no resources. Because they have no education, they are condemned to be poor all their lives.

The British charity Save the Children says that it is important to talk to child labourers to find solutions. Not all work is bad or dangerous. In some cases, if children can't work, they or their families can't survive. Boycotts of products made using child labour result in the children being forced to do more dangerous work. Save the Children supports projects that give young workers access to education and better working conditions.

For example, in the Democratic Republic of Congo, teenagers from poor families receive some money to start businesses. They can buy products to sell at the market and make some money. Because they are the bosses, they can choose when to work and they have money to pay for school.

Embroiderers like Nancy can go to classes organized by Save the Children. The charity also helps them get reasonable pay for their work. Nancy says, "Now we know that our products sell very well in Europe. Before, I didn't know how much money I received. It was written down. I couldn't read it. I used to think it was a good idea to ban products made by children. But I live in the practical world, and I'm very concerned about my family. For large families, it's very important for at least one or two children to work. If we don' work, our families won't survive."
